

4 NABBED IN OHIO FIRE DEATH OF 12

TODAY

The Voice of Edison. Comfort for the Old. Scenario Writers Take Notice. A Little Frozen Group.

By ARTHUR BRISNANE. (Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

DR. HUTCHISON has heard the voice of Thomas A. Edison, speaking from "the beyond" through a medium.

Dr. Hutchison, who was Mr. Edison's engineer for 10 years, says Mr. Edison this message:

"Well, Hutch, I have had to revise my ideas about life after death. I am on the other side of the river, but I don't know where I am going from here."

Dr. Hutchison recognized Edison's voice absolutely, so we may not doubt that the medium found him on the other side of that river. But those that knew Edison for many years would have expected something more exciting and enlightening. Not one word about his trip through the ether, colder than 400 degrees below.

DR. ADOLPH LORENZ, of Vienna, back in America, will continue here as he has continued at home his useful work of bloodless surgery. Men past 70 with the bad habit of calling themselves "old" will find encouragement in Dr. Lorenz's achievement. He has treated 50,000 cases—his operations call for great physical effort.

Yet Dr. Lorenz is active, mentally and physically as powerful as ever. And he is 78 years old.

He tells reporters: "All my life I have been straightening limbs. It is unfortunate that there is not also a method for straightening out the brains of men."

He believes that "if any race of men should start another war, the rest of the world should rise up and annihilate them."

It should, but it would not. It would take sides in the war as it did before. This country might even send a few million men and ten thousand million dollars to enliven the proceedings.

MRS. AIMEE SEMPLE McPherson Sutton will produce a religious motion picture. A good director, going back to ancient, simple beliefs that Mrs. Aimee Hutton possesses, should produce a marvelous picture.

It would show a real satan, with horns, tail and cloven hoofs, "going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it." It would show him scurrying across an evening landscape, disheveled as a huge black dog, as Goethe shows him.

It would represent him leading a wild dance on the broken, allowing the director to introduce the "most beautiful one hundred young ladies in the world" and some interesting characters of antiquity, all of whom, presumably, became satan's property at death.

There might be an interesting interview between satan and Aimee Semple Hutton herself. A finale, borrowed from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," or "Faust," might show Mrs. Hutton crowned with light, rising to her eternal reward with angels on both sides of her, leaving satan on his knees, converted and vowing to devote the rest of his existence to good works.

What a chance for a scenario writer.

White To Ask Jobless Aid, School Funds

GOVERNOR WILL OUTLINE HIS PLAN MONDAY

Program Calls For Raising About $12,000,000.

NEW TAXES SEEN Back Salaries for Teachers Will be Recommended.

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21. — Governor George White expects to announce the administration's program for unemployment relief and public school financing Monday. This program, the governor said today, will be outlined in a public statement and will not be in the form of a special message to the general assembly. It was agreed upon at a cabinet meeting last night.

Silent on Tax Proposals. The relief program contemplates the raising of approximately $12,000,000 by the state to supplement local funds and funds to be obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation to finance the current year's relief needs.

The governor said he expects to suggest new forms of taxation to raise the state's share, but did not divulge what form the new taxes would take or how they will be raised.

Separate School Fund Urged. The governor said his recommendations on a school financing plan contemplates taking care of back salaries of teachers in state aid districts. He does not anticipate, however, that the sum needed to pay back salaries will approximate the $3,500,000 which has been claimed.

The administration program of school financing also contemplates the establishment of a separate fund for this purpose. The initial contribution to this fund would be the proceeds from the cigarette tax which amounts to about $8,500,000 for the biennium. This is about the normal amount that the state now contributes to weak school districts.

Mort Plan Not Contemplated. The administration school relief program, according to Finance Director Howard L. Bevis does not contemplate enactment of the Mort plan which advocates general financing of the state's public schools. This would require more than $35,000,000 annually, Bevis said. The Mort plan, however, is expected to be presented to the general assembly by its sponsors.

In anticipating that much less than $3,500,000 will be required to pay back salaries of teachers, Finance Director Bevis indicated that he proposed to have a complete audit of the school accounts made.

"I am certain, he said, "that a very large portion of the $3,500,000 is not back salaries. I am disposed to pay the back salaries, but not the bills accumulated from the time of Adam through the extravagance of the local school boards."

FIRE DESTROYS WARREN CLUB

Trumbull County Club House Is Swept by $50,000 Blaze Friday Night.

By The Associated Press. WARREN, O., Jan. 21. — The Trumbull County club, near here, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin last night with a loss estimated by firemen at $50,000.

Cut Taxes, Too

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 21.—The No. 2 president went down to Washington to confer with Huey Long and Herbert Hoover; with Hoover about firewood in the White House basement, and Long on international and national affairs. Every United States citizen is taxed $77 a head. That's $10 more than last year. Every wage earner has been cut from 10 to 50 per cent, but the cost of being governed has taken a 12 1/2 per cent rise.

Then you hear birds say: "All you need to restore prosperity is confidence." Yeah? Well, you will help restore prosperity if you put taxes in proportion to the benefits you receive from them, the same as any other commodity. Did you receive $10 more protection this year than last?

ROOSEVELT SEES MUSCLE SHOALS

President-elect Roosevelt, accompanied by Senator George W. Norris (above), made an inspection today of the $150,000 Muscle Shoals nitrate and power project near Florence, Ala. The project's fertilizer and power plants have been idle for more than a decade. The invitation to Norris, advocate of federal operation, is seen in some quarters as indicating Mr. Roosevelt may favor its operation by the government.

GEORGE MOORE, FAMOUS IRISH NOVELIST, DIES

Writer, Aged 81, Left Unfinished "Modern" Novel.

By The Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 21. — George Moore, the famous Irish novelist, died at 6 a. m. today. He would have been 81 years old next month.

Despite his advanced years and impaired health, Moore was active in the literary field close to the end. He left an uncompleted task in which he was greatly engrossed—the editing and supervising of a complete edition of his works.

He also left an unfinished "modern" novel, a little more than half of which had been written.

Wrote Best at 75. When he was 75 he decided to round out his career as a novelist by giving the world the best he ever produced, "Aphrodite in Aulis," the story of a young Athenian in the time of Pericles.

Moore had been called by some the last of the great Victorians; by others the first of the great Georgians. To all he was a connoisseur at writing and publishing books.

In the beginning of his career his books were sold by the tens of thousands at the ordinary popular price, but in the last decade he had published his works in private editions, beautifully bound and with exquisite type arrangement. They sold at $10 a volume.

One of the most discussed writers of the last generation, Moore was credited with introducing the modern English novel with his frankness and realism of detail. For that he was made the target of bitter abuse and suffered the attacks for 30 years. That was one of the reasons that impelled him to issue his novels privately and at such high price.

Born in County Mayo. Moore was born at Ballyglass, County Mayo, Ireland, Feb. 24, 1852, the son of George Henry Moore, a member of parliament. Instead of an Oxford or Cambridge education which might have been his, he went to Paris, where he frequented the cafes with Manet and Degas.

His education he imbibed from the picture galleries and talking to the learned men of his day. From these associations he became imbued with a desire to paint great

ROOSEVELT, NORRIS GO TO MUSCLE SHOALS

Use of War Debt Plan As Trade Tool Is Seen.

PLANS VACATION

President-elect is En Route to Warm Springs.

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON, Associated Press Staff Writer. SHEFFIELD, Ala., Jan. 21.—Beginning an inspection of the gigantic Muscle Shoals, Alabama, power and nitrate project, President-elect Roosevelt told a crowd here today that "I am confident congress will work with me and we can get something practical done," to put "Muscle Shoals back on the map."

Significance was attached to his statement that "we are going to treat Muscle Shoals from a national standpoint."

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, whom Mr. Roosevelt introduced to the crowd at the station here as "the father of Muscle Shoals," is preparing to push his bill for government operation next session.

The President-elect also introduced Senator Dill, of Washington, power expert; Frank P. Walsh, New York power adviser, and E. A. Scattergood, a leader in the power field in the southwest. Governor Miller introduced Mr. Roosevelt from the rear platform of his special train. After the speech the party left by automobile to inspect the project.

Studies War Debts.

Mr. Roosevelt is believed to be ready to employ war debt payments from foreign nations as a bargaining tool to restore world trade when the forthcoming economic conference meets.

Some of his most intimate advisers on this subject are discussing a postponement of payments by Great Britain, the first country invited to discuss the debts question, for the period of the depression as a means of obtaining quick action on the Roosevelt trade policy.

NO TRASE OF NICHOLS FOUND

St. George Street Man, Missing Since Wednesday Reported Seen in Wellsville Streets Friday.

Police today said no trace had been found of Harry J. Nichols, 29, electrician, of 816 St. George street, East End, who has been missing from his home since last Wednesday night.

Apparently ill, he left home at 7:30 p. m. and later attended evangelistic services in the Chester Nazarene church. Tollkeepers on the Chester bridge said he did not return to the Ohio side on foot.

Friends, who said he seemed not to recognize them, reported seeing Nichols on the streets in Wellsville Friday, the family said.

GANGSTERS ROB GAMBLING PLACE

TOKYO PLANES BOMB CHINESE IN JEHOI ZONE

Attempt to Break up Concentration of 33,000 Troops.

By The Associated Press. For the third time this week Japanese military planes bombed Chinese troops today in the Jehol district in northeast Jehol province in an attempt to break up concentrations of a reported army of 33,000. Heavy punishment was inflicted.

Authoritative sources in Geneva said the Japanese government rejected all essential points of the League of Nations committee of nineteen's compromise proposal for conciliation of the Manchurian dispute. A rupture between the league and Japan was considered imminent.

China Calls More Troops

A Tokyo dispatch said the Japanese government failed to instruct its delegates to give a definite "yes" or "no," as requested, to the league proposals.

It offered acceptance providing invitations to the United States and Russia to participate were omitted.

The Chinese Nationalist government was reported strengthening military garrisons on the coast and in the Great Yangtze valley. Thousands of troops—some reports said a quarter of a million—were reported being sent into the north China war zone.

Plan to Split China Fails

Japanese efforts to induce former President Tuan Chi-Jui to set up an opposition government in Peking and split China in half were reported to have failed. Tuan, long credited with close associations with the Japanese, was reported to have gone to Nanking to offer his services to the Chinese Nationalist government.

Foreign Minister Uchida warned

China against "unfortunate eventualities" if it opposed the Japanese campaign in Jehol which he described as "an integral part" of Manchukuo.

FIFTH SOUGHT IN ARSON PLOT AT CLEVELAND

One Ohioan and Three Pennsylvania Men Are Held.

STORY UNFOLDED

Gang is Blamed for $2,000,000 Loss in 10 Years.

By The Associated Press. CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—A gigantic conspiracy that caused the death of 12 persons in the Ellington apartment fire on June 7 last was disclosed by police today as four of five men named as perpetrators of the plot were in custody.

Ray I. Turk, who Safety Director Frank J. Merrick charged with hiring a professional arson gang to set fire to his barber supply shop in the apartment building, "so he could collect the insurance on it," was arrested before sunrise in Akron. He lay sleeping, fully clothed, in an insurance office in an old house.

Two other alleged members of a gang that Merrick said "in the last ten years has set fires from New York to St. Louis that caused $2,000,000 worth of damage," surrendered in Pittsburgh while a fourth, L. J. Kamos, 64, a former attorney called by Merrick the "king-pin" of the gang, is serving a sentence in Rock View penitentiary at Bellefonte, Pa.

Two Charge "Frame-up."

Paul Childs, a pharmacist, and Samuel Neaman, an insurance adjuster, both of Pittsburgh, disclaimed any knowledge of the arson plot when they gave themselves up. At Pittsburgh, Childs branded the case as a "frame-up."

Turk's arrest followed an all-night search that led detectives from Cleveland to Ashland, O., and back to Akron. Several Akron houses had been raided on the false belief Turk was hiding there.

Merrick's story of the widespread investigation that preceded issuance against the five yesterday had unearthed, he said, a "story of the fire that, when completed will make detective cases of fiction look tame in comparison."

Gasoline, Fuse Used.

Merrick, who with Fire Chief James E. Granger and Chief Warden Patrick E. Barrett traveled thousands of miles gathering the threads of evidence they hope will convict the men, said the information gathered was so complete they could say who actually started the fire, where the material used was obtained and exactly how much of the material was used.

Merrick, Granger and Barrett made scores of trips to Pittsburgh, gathering their information. They went as far west as Chicago. At times, traveling incognito, they talked to the "fire bugs" themselves and to persons in the underworld who know about the activities of arson gangs.

They learned, Merrick said, that the fire was started by the ignition of gasoline and a chemical substance either by a time fuse or a candle. A former member of the arson gang, now serving a sentence for arson, gave the officials a statement containing all the details.

Extradition Proceedings Started.

Merrick today started extradition proceedings to get Childs and Neaman to Cleveland. The latter, police charged, adjusted the insurance claim on the Ambridge, Pa., building which Kamos and his gang fired.

Gov. Clifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania already has been notified of the charge against Kamos, there by setting up a legal barrier to his release until Cleveland police arrest him at Rockview penitentiary.

HANCOCK GETS G. O. P. PLACE

Hancock was named at a meeting of the local committee in the municipal court room Friday night.

The committee also voted to combine the offices of secretary and treasurer, Emil Leibschner assuming the place. The office of treasurer was formerly held by Pearce.

GLASS BANKING BILL FACES WALL OF OPPOSITION

OKLAHOMAN TO PREVENT VOTE ON PROPOSAL

Thomas Defies Senate To Invoke Cloture Rule.

WOUNDS OPENED

Self-styled Kingfish Long Aiding in Delay.

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — The Glass banking bill today piled squarely up against just as big a mountain of opposition as when Huey Long openly hurled filibustering obstacles in the senate's path.

It was Thomas of Oklahoma, a leader with Long in the racking fight on the measure, who came to the front with a declaration that he would use every power to prevent a vote and defied the senate to invoke the cloture rule.

Again cutting deeply into the open wounds made in Democratic ranks by the filibusters, Long, the self-styled Louisiana Kingfish, kept up his end of the dilatory tactics, but denied that he was filibustering.

He tried to gain time by asking a recess until Monday, he said in this and from Senator Glass (D., Va.), the author of the bill, came an announcement that he would insist on night sessions next week.

Amputation in Amendments. Despite the voluntary agreement for limitation of debate which now has become virtually meaningless, opponents of the bill found ammunition in the bundle of amendments which have been proposed.

The agreement restricted each senator to one hour on the measure itself and a half-hour on each amendment. And there are 63 amendments pending—enough to tie the senate in a legislative knot for weeks.

Meanwhile, advocates of the banking bill showed a willingness to make some concessions on the controversial branch-banking sections around which the filibuster has centered.

But the opponents, a little band of four, who were encouraged by

34 STUDENTS GET DIPLOMAS

Long's report that President-elect Roosevelt is against the state-wide banking clause, sought every means at their command to defeat action. Debate Appropriation Bill. The house today moved forward with debate on the war department appropriation bill while the Democratic leadership studied the lashing administered yesterday by President Hoover for blocking his government regrouping plan.

The chief executive said great economies in federal expenditures would have been made if his executive orders had been carried out and also disputed claims of Democratic leaders that his budget estimates had been cut.

Instead of a reduction, Mr. Hoover said, the first appropriation bills so far reported in the house have been increased by $25,000,000.

34 STUDENTS GET DIPLOMAS

Eight Grade Exercises Held Friday in Wellsville.

A large crowd attended the commencement exercises Friday night in the Wellsville high school auditorium when 34 eighth grade pupils of the MacDonald building were given diplomas, making them members of the high school freshman class.

The address was delivered by Rev. Earl W. Slayton, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church. His topic was "You Take Out What You Put In."

He stressed the thought that the adult life of the boy and girl would be shaped principally on what they did in the grade school. It is here that life is moulded, he said. He portrayed two boys, one that obeyed his teacher and his parents, while the other was disobedient, and traced their careers in the grade rooms, high school and college. The one in the end will have gained knowledge, while the other will only have his diploma without knowledge, he declared.

He reminded the members of the class that it was impossible to take anything out of life that was not put into it.

Superintendent S. E. Daw, who presented the diplomas in the absence of Dr. J. S. McCulloch, president of the board of education, told the class that life was an adventure, in answer to the question he propounded to parents, "What do you desire for your children?"

He said: "If you have success no one will stop you," he said.

The invocation was given by Rev. John H. Butler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, while the music was in charge of the high school orchestra. A double quartet from the class sang "Bells of the Sea," while the entire group sang "The Old Refrain." The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Slayton.

AUTO DEALER ACCEPTS CATS, DOGS IN SWAPS

Musical Instruments, Ducks also Figure in Trades.

By The United Press. CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—William Fessenden is the big barter and exchange man of Cleveland's used car business.

The harmless looking sign hanging over the office which says: "A New Deal" doesn't mean much to the casual passerby but to those in the know it means you can obtain an automobile for anything you've got if you've got enough of it.

To prove that he doesn't care much what he gets for a car, Big Bill has several cats, a couple of ducks, a police dog, an ice box, several pieces of jewelry and two raccoons in his place of business.

"I'll take anything in exchange for a car but a vacant lot," Bill said, "homesites are absolutely out."

His most prized possession at present are two Muskovian ducks, brought in as a down payment on a car by an Oak Harbor, O., farmer. He has an offer to trade the ducks for two raccoons to a man in Garrettsville, O.

"This is the best way I know to sell used cars these days," Fessenden said. "It gets people who are short of cash to buy. And once they have a car, they can get out and hustle around and find work. Then they can make their payments on the car. It works out fine."

Since he has been accepting goods as part-payment on cars, Fessenden has received such things as pianos, harps, a white owl, a monkey, rabbits, a pony, a motion picture lantern, dogs, saxophones and an accordion.

"Once I took two pigs as a down payment on a car," he said, "I took them to my butcher, had them killed and put the meat in his icebox so I could get it if I needed it."

"Swapping things like this puts a little personality into the business. I have a lot of fun. One day I took two cats I got in a trade and placed them in a cage in front of the store. I tacked a sign up that said: 'Wild Cats of St. Clair.'"

The invocation was given by Rev. John H. Butler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, while the music was in charge of the high school orchestra. A double quartet from the class sang "Bells of the Sea," while the entire group sang "The Old Refrain." The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Slayton.

Two Deaths Within Week Tell Dangers Faced By Test Fliers

Capt. Elmendorf and Lieut. Woodring, Last of "Three Musketeers," are Dayton Victims.

By The Associated Press. DAYTON, O., Jan. 21.—Two deaths within a week. They tell with sad effectiveness the constant dangers to which test pilots expose themselves to prove or disprove the worth of new types of military planes.

Probably at no other field in the country, where air corps officers are stationed, is the work of fliers so exacting and the dangers of death and serious injury from faulty planes under test so great, as at Wright field here. There the major portion of the laboratory and test flying work for the engineering division of the army air corps is done.

Hazards Emphasized. Such experimental work last Friday caused the death of Captain Hugh Elmendorf of the office of the chief of the air corps at Washington. Yesterday, it added Lieut.

I. A. Woodring, the last of the "Three Musketeers". Both died while testing new type planes. Although those fatalities were the first in six years here, the rapidity with which they followed one another emphasizes the hazard in the army test pilots' daily routine.

Army regulations require that before any airplane submitted by manufacturers for use by the air corps may be purchased, it first must pass satisfactorily what is regarded the most rigid laboratory test ever devised for planes. Equipment and parts, whether perfected by a manufacturer or by air corps engineers, must undergo equally severe tests.

Go Through Deadly Tailspin. These are climaxed by actual flying tests to determine the suitability for air corps purposes. It is in these flight tests that the Wright field fliers subject themselves to the greatest hazards, daring fliers are selected, for the pilots must put their planes through a definite fact-finding schedule that includes every known maneuver, including the deadly tail spin.

Buying Barbara

by Julia Cleft-Addams • Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

SYNOPSIS: With Lella Cane helping from the background, Farrell Armitage persuades Barbara Quentin to go to a dance with him a few hours after he accidentally meets her. Farrell has told Lella, who had expected him to propose to her, that even though Barbara is engaged to marry the cruel and crippled Mark Lodely in five days, she will marry Farrell instead. Twenty years before Farrell's fortune had been badly invested by the law firm of Quentin, Lodely and Cane; restoring it ruined the firm and caused the death of Barbara's father, although James Cane prospered. All this is in the air as Mark shows Farrell some of his sketches. Lella Barbara dresses for the dance.

Chapter 11.
HELPING MARK
"YES," said Armitage. "This is good. That isn't I mean, I don't care for it; its sentiment seems to me false. I'm not critic, of course, and my philistine judgment will probably get me thrown out of your house; but, in the meantime, I'll buy what I like."

He had let the word fall with great negligence. "Buy!" His eyes rested on one of Mark's thin hands and saw the muscles stiffen for a second. Then he passed to his next point.

"You must forgive my curiosity, but why in the world does one find you in Kings Mallard when there are Paris and London? Or Rome?"

The thin hand, still a little unsteady indicated the crutch propped against a wall.

"It's not forbidden to use a crutch in Paris or Rome or even in London," reasoned Armitage pleasantly, putting aside the three small land apes on which his choice had fallen.

"Ah, but here in Kings Mallard we have a house to garage the crutch in," explained the artist. "In London, we shouldn't even have the traditional garret. Traditional garrets, in London, come very expensive."

"Also—" his fair head gleamed in the firelight as he made one of his baffled movements—"I know pretty accurately how good I am; which is to say that I know how good I might have become if there had been money enough to take me and my crutch out of Kings Mallard."

Those landscapes—"he touched Armitage's selection—"are quite nice; quite distinguished. But they don't even begin to represent my real work."

"I've tried some portraits," Mark smiled.

"I've tried some portraits," Armitage, quietly opening his checkbook, was remembering Lella's answer to the same query.

"Portraits—yes. When he feels cruel enough. There was, however, no cruelty for the moment visible in the curve of Mark's pale, rather putting lips. He seemed, at the most, amused by his recollections. Armitage made out a check that was neither charitably large nor timidly small.

"What are you going to do with the landscapes?" asked Mark, accepting the check without examination.

"You may be no critic, but I know enough not to hang them near your others."

"I'll take your advice on the matter."

"How can I give it when I haven't seen—"

"But, of course, I hoped you would come and see. If you and Mrs. Lodely would stay with me in town for a bit, I should be delighted. My house is in Brandis Place—I'm going back there tomorrow. Would next Thursday suit you?"

He rose, his purchase under his arm. His attitude was now at its most negligent, but he was immensely alert. Mark, so far so easily handled, might suddenly from some unaccountable instinct sense a purpose behind this friendliness. He held his breath. He wondered, belatedly, if outspokenness would, after all, have been better. "I want to take your girl from you—you Barbara. I warn you, I'm going to try." Something like that? He gazed steadily at the thin figure upon the couch.

"No," said Mark, sighing. "I'm afraid next Thursday isn't possible."

"Too bad! Well, we must fix up something else—some other time."

Little Armful!

Groucho gets playful with blood Thelma Todd, the "vamp"—and forgets himself! A hilarious moment in the new Four Marx Brothers comedy, "Horse Feathers," which opens a four-day engagement at the Columbia theater today.

Armitage became amiably vague. "I'm leaving the country for the winter months but no doubt we shall meet again." He looked at his watch. "I say, Miss Quentin's been waiting four minutes already!"

"She won't mind if you tell her you've been buying my pictures," Mark's lids had fallen again and he was tearing a dinky thread from the rug that covered him. "She has the business head of the family. As a matter of fact, next Thursday—"

He paused for so long that Armitage was on the verge of some saving commonplace.

"As a matter of fact," insisted Mark, suddenly and violently throwing aside the rug. "I can come up on Thursday, if you're still kind enough to ask me. Goodness knows when I shall ever get the chance of a holiday from Toxeter, once I'm there! . . . It's most extraordinarily decent of you to be willing to put up with me."

Armitage took a deep breath. He drew away from the fire, which seemed to be making the room too hot and took another breath, even deeper. It meant such a lot, this postponement of Thursday's ceremony! It meant, among other things, that one need never, what ever happened, tell any punctuation towards Mark Lodely.

"I'll send a car down, then," he said cheerfully. "You'll prefer to travel by road; less fatiguing. By the way, what do you consider 'real work'?"

"Caricature," answered Mark. He had drawn himself up to a sitting position and pitched the rug to the floor. His pale eyes glittered, his hair straggled over his forehead, his shoulders twisted. As though he had been hurried earthwards from some distant star and had fallen crumpled, but defiant still.

"Caricature," he repeated. "I suppose it'll sicken you, but I'm good at caricaturing people. I like it, it's meat and drink to me. There's something in my psychology—"

"Then you must meet McCoughlin," suggested Armitage, dodging discussion of the artistic psyche. "You know his work, of course. I'm fortunate in possessing two of his most slashing efforts at myself; also, his friendship. . . . We must arrange something."

"Till Thursday, then."

Making his way gingerly down the ill-lit, cluttered staircase, Armitage began to lose his sense of

But Barbara and Farrell decide not to dance after all, Monday.

Japan Stands Pat

Spokesmen for Japan, in the involved negotiations being carried on at Geneva, don't try to hide the fact that they are restricted in their policies by a strong anti-American feeling among the Japanese people. Ironically, this nation's offense consists of doing first and vigorously what League of Nations members are doing reluctantly and weakly—withholding recognition of the puppet state of Manchukuo.

Japan's dislike of the United States has been prodded within the last few days by Secretary Stimson's reaffirmation of the so-called Hoover doctrine of refusing to recognize territory acquired by aggression or force of arms. It was prodded still more by the president-elect's declaration that he would uphold this doctrine. Knowing the possibilities of trouble entailed, Mr. Roosevelt displayed courage in publishing beforehand this important point in his foreign policy.

In the tangle of diplomatic negotiations spawned by the Manchurian affair there is one point from which comprehension may make a fair beginning. That is certainly that Japan will stand pat. It is the realist; other nations are the theorists. Its realism constitutes a great advantage, evident in every stage of the problem. For each disputed action it has an explanation satisfactory to itself. It has given no ground. In a manner of speaking, it has made up its mind so firmly that the judgment of other nations, even if it were more positive than it is, still would suffer by comparison.

The offense of the United States consists not so much of holding an opinion critical of Japan's actions in Manchuria, but of holding it with greater firmness than the League of Nations has dared to show. Unless that body abstains from a course of conciliation and supports the Hoover doctrine, the United States will be at the disadvantage of standing out alone against Japanese expansion in the orient.

It is questioned, and with sound justification, whether or not the United States dares to refuse to grant its attitude toward Japan. Possibilities of greater friction are real if Japan continues to stand pat and this nation continues to exert critical pressure. Reexamination is in order.

Pensions for the Aged

Assignment to committee of an old age pension bill in the state house of representatives marks another move in a patient, though poorly organized, drive for enactment of a pension law. Ohio faces the duty of forming an opinion on this type of legislation.

There is little to guide it in the experience of other states. Seventeen of them and one territory have old age pension laws, but they vary so widely that generalization on their merits and defects is risky. The public accepts as one of its duties the care of the aged, but the pension method still is vaguely experimental.

The turning point of the problem seems to be the relative cost of providing by pensions or through funds appropriated for administration of infirmaries. It is the ideal of pension advocates to avoid placing the stigma of "poor house" residence on the unfortunate, but the ideal has been abused grievously in such old age pension legislation as exists.

Viewed as a whole, the legislation names so many qualifications of eligibility for pension aid that the recipient is almost entirely dependent on his pension payment, which stood at an average of slightly less than $230 a year in 1931. Seven states bar persons from pension benefits if they have any income of specified amount. Most states bar persons with property valued at more than $2,000 or $3,000 dollars.

The workability of old age pension laws has not been demonstrated. As theory, they are highly commendable. A national society which has accepted as an ideal the principle that every person is entitled to the necessities of life finds itself at this stage in its progress striving to adjust practice to theory. It is not demanded that the general assembly enact old age pension laws immediately. It is demanded, however, by intelligent residents of the state that Ohio keep abreast of developments in the field. Unless the whole course of social progress is changed there will be, ultimately, some form of insurance against old age. This state should take an active interest in the experimental work now being done.

The Orphan Senator

The rightness and wrongness of playing politics depends on position. No one can be more blatantly indignant than a politician on the losing side. By the horrified tones of his protests one might be deceived into believing that he was a helpless lamb fallen among wolves.

The Huey Long episode in the senate has set off a fervent chorus of bleating by gentlemen who would have the people believe they are being made the victims of dark plots by the opposition. Specifically, it is charged that Louisiana's rising statesman has been made the tool of "lame duck" Republicans who are using him to put the Democrats and their friends in a hole.

The offense described is truly horrible. It is mitigated, however, by a few conditions which the protesting innocents shouldn't be forgetting. For one thing, enlightened opinion will not be believing that innocence of political methods has become a class distinction in the senate. To put it more boldly,

The same gentlemen who are on the losing side now have been on the winning side at other times. If they had the same chance to embarrass their opponents they would be making the most of it.

More important than this, however, is the fact that Huey Long is a Democrat, not a Republican. It scarcely seems fair to make Republicans, even "lame duck" ones, accept responsibility for his actions. If, as charged, he really is allowing himself to be "used" by the repudiated leadership of the Republican party, it would seem more tactful for the Democratic brethren to refrain from admitting it.

Apparently, having proof that they can exercise no control over Mr. Long, the responsible leaders of Democracy are willing to make of him an orphan senator. Rumored to be quarreling temporarily under the Republican roof, his tenure there depends on the length of time he is willing to embarrass his own party. He is by no means eligible for adoption. When the day comes that he can be useful to Democrats—and it will—they will be wanting him back temporarily.

Philosophical Grammarians

Another grammarian, Dean George H. McKnight, of Ohio State university, has yielded gracefully to the inevitable. "It is me" has his approval. "It is a natural use of the expression and is much to be preferred over 'It is I,'" he declares.

That's the proper spirit, professor. Perhaps in the other half century the last of the stiff-necked classicists who stubbornly try to sweep back the irresistible waves of popular usage with their neat but frail little rules will be gone.

In their place will be a new school of accommodating grammarians who will determine correctness by charts showing to a dotted "I" what the majority of the people are saying. Rules of grammar will be made to fit speech. If enough people feel like saying "I seen her when she done it," the grammar sleuths will get busy with their charts and tabulating machines. If they can show a popular majority the change will be made with no further fuss.

And when good grammarians die and stand in the assembly at the pearly gate, St. Peter will pronounce their names with a twinkle in his eye. "Who is George H. McKnight?" he will thunder. From the crowd will echo back a stentorian, "It is me!" The good saint's lips will twitch with merriment. "Come in, sir, by all means come in," he will plead. "We need a lot of your kind to tone down this place. I'm glad we're out of the dark ages when I used to have to send you on your way."

A Big Job

For citizens anxious to serve there could be few more abundant opportunities than are presented by places on the committees and commissions which have been and will be created by the various states to study methods of dealing with the liquor problem in the future. This state need not remind members of its commission of the importance of their investigations and conclusions.

To a considerable extent their findings and recommendations will become the basis for whatever legislative action it may be necessary for the state to take if and when the structure of federal prohibition is eliminated or altered. They are dealing, unfortunately, with a problem whose ultimate form remains conjectural, but by examining all its various potential forms they may give valuable assistance to those who sooner or later must place it before the people in definite form.

There is, fortunately, no tendency to disregard the certainty that prohibition merely will have entered another troublesome stage if the federal government relinquishes responsibility for it to the states. Whatever is done—outright repeal of the 18th amendment or so-called modification of it—the states' responsibility will be increased hugely. They have been clamoring for their "rights," oblivious of the fact that they lost them by their own carelessness. Before 1920 they had the "right" to control manufacture, sale and distribution of liquor. They gave it up—easily. They have a direct obligation to the ideals of good government to make certain that they are prepared to receive it back in a state of complete preparation for the responsibilities that go with it.

A Helpful Gesture

For the obvious reason that politicians don't usually talk about resigning as long as their salary is paid, the threat of Maryland's Senator Tydings to walk out on the senate in disgust is worth some attention. The fact that the gentleman is reported to have a good job in the bag when the Roosevelt administration takes the reins is unimportant to everyone but his critics. He has made an appealing gesture.

Newspapers grow so weary of pointing out congressional weaknesses and inconsistencies as their readers do of associating constantly with the realization that there is an unending number of things to criticize. Both would welcome any sign of improvement; both have their eyes peeled to catch some sign of improvement. For that reason alone, Senator Tydings' resignation threat is worth discussing.

The senator, according to those who should know him best, is a skeptical kind of fellow. It isn't his way to be impressed with his own importance in the scheme of things.

He thinks the senate has been behaving in an idiotic manner. So do tens of thousands of his countrymen, and their disgust hasn't been sweetened by the observation that among the many intelligent men elected to that body there has been little protest over the idiotic spectacle that has been going on for the last fortnight. As far as can be observed by their statements, they are taking themselves and their show with a gravity so heavy it is strangling their sense of proportion.

Senator Tydings proves that there lives at least one critic on the inside. He is a sign unto a distressed people that there exists a possibility of reform within the inner circle. Even if resignation wouldn't mean anything but a vacation before taking another political job, his threat was a grand gesture.

NEWS AND NEWS TRANSMISSION.

By J. H. Galbraith.

For The Associated Press.

On June 25, 1876, General George A. Custer, a native of Harrison, O., and a half-brother of Brice W. Custer, a sheriff of Franklin county, with his entire command of U. S. cavalry, was wiped out by Sioux Indians under Sitting Bull. It was days before the awful news began to trickle down to the outposts and finally was relayed to the war department at Washington.

It is singular that at that very moment, a demonstration was being made in Philadelphia with the instrument now known as the telephone, one of the efficient agencies for communication.

June 25 that year fell on Sunday, and although the centennial exposition, then in progress, was closed for the day a group of scientists with the inventor, Bell, made some experiments with the little instrument which was to become the telephone we know today.

A 500-foot line was used and several sentences were transmitted, to the great enthusiasm of the scientists present, who predicted that with a perfected instrument such as the invention the human voice could be carried thousands of miles—as it is, and more, every day now.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. MCINTYRE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—They've finally coaxed me around for a little plain and fancy sitting at the photographer's. And, Odds Boddins and T. Sufferns Tailor, am I awfully! If he chucks me under the chin once more, his left shin will begin aching. Lo, he seems to be going into a dance.

The last time I was in a photograph gallery they asked me to watch for the birdie. I suppose at my age they'll have an old owl hoot at me. Just a retired bird watcher. If I have to sit around watching birds, I'll choose a penguin. They kill me, walking like Chaplin.

He's slicking back my hair. He better let it alone and do something about these valises under my eyes. They'll photograph like a couple of Columbus Circles. A bag's-eye view! One thing, they don't hold up your head with iron braces any more. Just a minute—he's beginning to focus.

The old focus at home! My legs, limbs or whatever they are this season, don't please him. I'm not wild about them myself. But they are as good as Lisle Bell's. He wants one crossed languidly over the other. I'm a newspaperman, not a tailor. You know, write pieces. The phone would ring.

His wife warns him to bring liver for the cat. He thinks that amusing. I sit here with legs pretzeled while he makes cat-and-liver jokes. I have a notion to tell him the one George Ade sent. Have to clean it up a little. But why waste a good gag on this mug. A mugger is what he really is.

He's sliding in plates. Sticks in one and takes out one. Stick, stick, stick. I'll be all squeaky-green again in a minute and catching at my thumbs. He's lost something. Likely the bulb they squeeze. Probably left it on the train to town this morning. As I began to waver, he yells "Steady!" The way I'm waving this will be a group picture. Whatever it is, it's a gift for posterity.

He says that was fine and I may relax a while. Isn't that ducky? About to go womp and Big Hearted Clarence permits you to rest. The next shot is to be standing. Will everybody please stand with heads bare? Have the orchestra play. "Save the King!" And you, little boy on the bicycle, ride on. This is no public photographing.

He is fixing the long focus lens. Wonder if Robert Sherwood was ever snapped standing? He wants me to look unconcerned. He'll ask me to lay an egg next. Now he's tip-toeing around me. I'm getting edgy. If he's going to wrestle, he's got to promise clean breaks. O, it's my necktie. He wants to flounce it into more of a loop. A bit of lady's maidling, I call it. And he'd better speed up, if he doesn't want me to let go a roller-coaster scream.

Something has gone wrong. He's scowling. I'll hang my head and look pensive. I don't want him to go sulking and leave me drooping here like a sick auk. What in the world did I come for anyway? I'd be better off trying to make a living than bouncing around trying to look pretty. The photographer smiles. The storm has cleared. Just the moody type.

The next shot will be with my chin cupped in hand. I hope it does not come out in lavender. He wants me to look soulful. That's a cinch. I come from sombre stock. Far back as I remember, we McIntyres were brooders. Wait until I unbuckle my vest, ruffle my hair and sprawl in this arm chair. Make out I'm gazing into a roaring fire with my arm carelessly resting on a statuette, dreaming of moonbeams on Pont Neuf and my Peru bond. The ancient heartthrob.

All over now. I've been photographed standing, sitting and soul razing. Hope I didn't move in that soul razing. If that comes out right, it will give a few directors in Hollywood a twitch. I don't want George Fitzmaurice telegraphing me. Why should I become a film star? I'm getting along. I'm fire.

But the best thing was not having to look like that birdie. Goofy things, anyway. Sleeping with their heads tucked under their arms. Imagine! And hopping about stiff legged and wiping their noses on wooden perches.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

IT SHOULD be the aim of the wise to preserve strength and health. Some of the easy ways of doing this are neglected.

We constantly read about new germs and new ways of combating disease. They excite our interest, but why do we overlook the importance of so simple a thing as rest as a means of guarding against disease.

The medical profession has always recognized the importance of importance of taking a sufficient number of hours of sleep and rest. The doctors know that a tired person is more susceptible to infectious diseases, such as the common cold, influenza and pneumonia.

Stepping Stone to Disease. It would seem that few individuals really appreciate that rest is essential to good health. Yet there is no question that fatigue affects health; it is the stepping stone to disease.

Many say they have "no time to rest." Others boast of their untiring ability to work in spite of lack of sleep and rest. They are fooling themselves and doing grave injustice to health and friends.

When I speak of "rest," I do not mean alone an adequate number of hours of sleep. Thorough relaxation, with freedom from worry; time to take nourishing food, fresh air and sunlight; and definite hours of play, must be included in the program.

Rest is beneficial in proportion to the completeness of relaxation and the absence of worry. Worry interferes with restful sleep and often disturbs appetite and digestion. There are persons who just cannot rest though they try to do so. For years they have abused the health and strength of their bodies. I hope you will not permit yourself to reach this state of exhaustion.

What Fatigue Does. Bear in mind that when you are tired, all of your internal organs are tired. The stomach of a tired person does not supply the normal amount of the digestive juices. Then heartburn, acidity, "biliousness," headache and lack of elimination. That is the reason why you should eat lightly when tired.

If you do mental work, you require just as much rest and relaxation as if you were doing hard muscular work. Mental fatigue is equivalent to physical fatigue. There have been a few famous men who managed to work on a limited number of hours of sleep. I beg of you not to be misled by these exceptional examples, with thousands of others among the famous who had to take a great deal of sleep and rest.

I am often asked whether exercise is beneficial for a tired and listless feeling. It is beneficial. But exercise without an abundance of rest is harmful. It is dangerous, too, when taken in excess. It should only be done in moderation and with definite periods of rest. Too often, impaired health can be traced to poorly supervised exercise.

Obtain at least seven or eight hours of restful sleep. Drink six to eight glasses of water daily. Avoid any tendency toward constipation. Daily baths should be taken before retiring. Bathing relieves fatigue, induces sleep, and aids the body in eliminating waste products.

Answers to Health Queries. V. H. Q.—What should a girl of 17, 5 feet 2 inches tall weigh, also a woman of 49, 5 feet 1 inch tall?

A.—They should weigh respectively about 115 pounds and 134 pounds. This is about the average weight for people of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance. (Copyright, 1933, K. F. S., Inc.)

Rhyme a Day

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A Tent

A tent where flickering shadows play
When slanting sunrays creep,
Where all the winds of heaven stray
And birds at nightfall sleep.
A tent within a woodland nook
Where green leaves sing above
Is all of home some hearts can brook.

For some hearts have to rove.
A tent that may be here today,
Tomorrow may be gone,
As leaves, wind-tossed, may drift away.

Between the dusk and dawn,
Is all of home some hearts desire.
A tent on field or hill,
For some are touched by gypsy fire
And they must wander still.

A house may speak of lives of peace
And wealth and high degree;
A tent means rapture and release,
To hearts that must be free.

Heritage

We cannot not know them all,
These ancestors of ours
Who left us, through the long, slow years

Such strangely varied dowers.
One gave me wistful dreams
And love of wind-tossed foam,
Another gave a heart that clings
To tranquil ways and home.

One gave me truth and trust,
One gave me pride and fire,
The gift of one was faith enough
To grasp my heart's desire.

Women with laughing lips
And men who fought and dreamed;
So through my veins the changeful tide
Of diverse lives has streamed.

And sometimes I must ask,
As life so strangely runs,
How much of this myself is I,
How much those other ones?

ONCE OVER

BY J. J. MUNDY.

GIVING GIFTS.

There cannot be much joy in giving or in receiving if complaint is heard constantly about the amount of money expended to procure seasonable presents.

Too often the heads of families do a lot of grumbling when bills come in at the end of the month for gifts that were purchased, even by the one who makes the complaint.

Don't make gifts if it hurts you to pay for them. The greatest value is lost to the recipient and the donor is robbed of the pleasure he might gain from gift-giving.

Giving expensive presents to the family and afterward reminding them of the cost and how foolish it was to make such expenditures creates displeasure.

Perhaps in the spirit of a holiday time you are tempted to go beyond your means in making purchases.

If so, that is your affair and it is nothing for which you can blame others, is it?

Be a good sport when you overstep your financial ability in remembering your family at holidays and birthdays.

Do a little thinking before you spend, and don't complain afterward. (Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES.

THERE were many fine and appealing theatrical performances upon the stage of the old Brunt theater on South Market street which occupied the present site of the Beta building. Its stage upon its second floor in which the main auditorium was located had been erected upon its northern end. There was a small balcony at its southern extremity which could accommodate, it is recalled by some of the older residents, about 175 persons.

Its capacity in the regular seating section was about 500 which enabled nearly 600 persons to be accommodated on occasions. This theater was owned for a number of years by the late Henry Brunt, who also was active in pottery manufacturing. He was interested in the Brunt Knob Works along the river while his brother, William Brunt, conducted the plant under his name which was located at Walnut and East Third streets.

William Bridge, the father of William Brunt of East Fourth street, who long has been active in bill board advertising activities while also assisting in theatrical departures here, was the stage manager for the most part at the Brunt theater or opera house. Among these who as young men acted as ushers on occasions in this house were George Davidson and Robert Wallace, old residents say. In and about this theater John Bailey of Chester, was among those who also assisted in various capacities.

In discussing theatrical departures in East Liverpool during days of three decades and more ago in a Market street business place recently several men recalled a man whose name they could not remember who for perhaps a year or two was located under the Brunt theater while engaged in the making and the dispensing of waffles.

He stood out in their memory by reason of the fact that he was an exceedingly large man, one of the largest perhaps to ever live in the city. He was known to all and sundry for the excellence of the waffles which he sold.

THESE waffles were of the kind that did not get soggy when they were cold and they were sold at three for five cents," recalled George C. Smith of Avondale street. "These waffles were made by a Greek, younger than the man who dispensed them to the public." The latter in the beginning went about the streets with these waffles in a basket; then he assumed a push cart and it is believed that before he concluded his stay here he had a wagon in operation for a time.

He explained that the waffle man carried about an arrangement by which he sprinkled powdered sugar upon the trio of waffles sold so that they could be eaten immediately. His trade grew steadily and was particularly active upon nights when attractions were listed for the Brunt theater. During and after such performances the waffle man did a fine business with the theatrical patrons.

There is additional memory of this large man who dealt in waffles because of a huge pair of overalls that he wore on occasions. They had been procured for him by one of the early clothiers of East Liverpool who arranged that his eight-lettered name should be sewed on each pantalon leg in large letters. He good-naturedly agreed to this method of advertising his friend, the then local business man, in this manner.

A. J. McCain of East Fourth street, local business man of many years, also remembered well the so-called waffle man whose name he also could not recall. It was agreed that another outstanding feature about this once well known man in this community was his stentorian voice. When he shouted, "waffles, waffles," his tones were so strong that he boomed his information for a long distance away.

He had an infectious laugh which served to reveal his constant good nature. Mr. Smith remembered the time when the "Burlesque Sea Queens" appeared at the Brunt theater. It was an outstanding aggregation and carried about 400 persons, he recalled. The waffle man was among those who attended and saw the performance of the visiting performers.

DURING one of the song appearances of the leading lady with the troupe she sang a number in which she at times interpolated her own viewpoints. Seeing the good-natured, large man some seats away from her she, as the custom was for a bit of fun and railery, singled him out so that the audience would get a thrill over her seeming audacity. "O-h, you little fat rascal," she trilled as she tossed a seeming orange directly at him. Caught by her sudden action he instinctively threw out his hands to grasp the fruit coming in his direction. Instantly she drew back to her. He did not realize that a strong piece of rubber was attached to it causing it to rebound to her.

None enjoyed the momentary discomfiture that came to him more than the waffle man. He related one of his famous laughs with such vigor that the entire occupants of the theater were moved to break out in general merriment. The star had well chosen the man and the occasion for her bit of good-natured railery in this manner with her audience.

With a company in the Brunt theater on a night in 1891 was William Muldoon, then champion wrestler of the world, Mr. Smith said. He was the man who later became the trainer of John L. Sullivan and the later arbiter of sport activities in New York state. Then in the zenith of his physical prime he was meeting marked success as a wrestler.

His competitor upon the mat that evening was Bert Walker of Cincinnati. The latter weighed about 176 pounds while Muldoon tipped the beam at about 219 pounds. After a smart contest in which many local devotees of the sport were in attendance Muldoon was declared the victor.

This was perhaps the first and only time that William Muldoon whose name was as well known in the wrestling world as was that of John L. Sullivan in the prize ring ever visited in East Liverpool. It is not now recalled whether he and his associate upon his visit broke training rules to sample some of the delicacies of the waffle man.

William Muldoon is yet living in New York state where for many years he has maintained a place in which men may reclaim themselves physically under his direction. He was big enough to make even John L. Sullivan obey his commands while training. Those who remembered the waffle man declare that he later returned to Alliance, from whence he had come to this city. There he is said to have become a casualty of a street railway accident.

THE THEATER

THEATERS CURRENT

CERAMIC.

Many a woman who stands by her husband in the lean, hard years, scrimping and sacrificing, often loses him to an alluring young dandy after he acquires worldly success.

That he doesn't have to stay lost especially if the wife is clever, is proven by "No Other Woman," RKO-Radio Picture coming to the Ceramic theater Sunday.

Irene Dunne, Charles Bickford and Gwili Andre form the eternal triangle in this drama which depicts the rise of a steel mill worker to opulence.

But for the enterprise and desire of the wife to get away from the grime and glare of the steel mill, the husband would never have been anything but a steel worker—the best steel worker in the company, true, but always sweating in the heat of the furnaces!

With wealth comes leisure—time to notice other women—time to play—opportunity to get into mischief. Then trouble, separation, divorce—and a wife and mother's tremendous sacrifice to hold her own!

Eugene Walter's play, "Just a Woman," and a story by Owen Francis provided the plot for "No Other Woman." Besides Irene Dunne, Charles Bickford and Gwili Andre, the cast includes Eric Linden, Buster Miles, Leila Bennett, Christian Rub and others.

Bill Cages 13 Points and Cullen Gets Nine in Rough Battle Here; Andy Stewart Holds Hinkle Down.

A FIGHTING East Liverpool high school basketball team, still smarting from a defeat handed out by Salem a week ago, rose up here Friday night to upset a highly-touted Akron East aggregation of floor-men, 35 to 31, in one of the roughest frays staged in the Pottery City in many seasons.

Midland Shaded, 18-to-16

Beaver Cops Rough Fray in Last Minute.

In a wild battle which saw five players banned for unnecessary roughness, Beaver high edged out Rusty Lomond's Midland quintet Friday night at the Steel City, 18-16. It was Midland's eighth straight defeat. Willie Konara, Midland forward, was the first casualty, being forced from action in the second quarter when he sustained a bad cut in his head in a collision with Captain Lynch of Beaver. Then in the third period Charles Schmidt, Midland center, and Lynch engaged in a fist fight and both were put out of the game by Referee Forbes.

Later in the same period Korstell of Beaver went out on the four-foot route and Ulrich of Midland followed him in the final quarter. Midland sank six fielders compared to five for Beaver, but the latter quip converted eight of its 21 free throws, while the Crucibles could make only four of nine.

The clubs were tied 4-4 at the first quarter, while Beaver held a 7-6 advantage at half-time and was in front 14-13 at the end of the third period. With less than a minute to play the score was tied, but Beaver sank a field goal to take the verdict. Schmidt was Midland's high point man with three field goals, while Worstell got two double-pointers and a pair of fouls for Beaver.

The Midland Reserves scored a 18-19 victory in the prelim. Friday afternoon the Midland Junior high quint journeyed to Beaver Falls and took a 29-12 beating.

Boardman Rallies in Last Half to Whip Lisbon

Bikle "5" Trimmed, 30-to-23

Losers Failed to Maintain Half-time Lead Of 19-to-10.

FAILING to maintain a 19-10 lead they held at the end of the first half Phil Bikle's Lisbon high cagers went down to a 30-23 defeat at the hands of Boardman Friday night in the Mahoning county city. It was Lisbon's second Tri-County league setback.

Reese and Vanaman paced the Lisbon attack, scoring seven points apiece on three field goals and a foul. Linden, Boardman's flashy forward, found the hoops for a half-dozen goals from action and two charity tosses.

Stewart Better. Laughlin, playing the offensive game that made him the district's outstanding performer last season, sank six field goals and a foul. Cullen, before he was forced out in the third quarter on fouls, registered three fielders and the same number of charity tosses. Stewart played a great defensive game and found time to score seven points on three goals from action and a foul. Paul Shaw caged four counters.

Very pleasing to Coach Dixon was the work of Toe Triner, who was playing in his first varsity game. He looked mighty sweet, sinking one field goal and playing a good floor game.

Walker, East's blond forward, was the Orientals' big star, caging 10 points on four fielders and two fouls. Pitts got eight counters, sinking three fielders and connecting on two of the eight chances he received at the foul line.

In Front All the Way. The Potters were in the lead practically all the way, the score being tied 3-3 early in the first period and the locals being in front at all other times. Their biggest lead was in the third period when East found itself eight points behind Dixon's fast-stepping aggression.

Both clubs played fast, hard basketball and Referee Buck Snyder was forced to call three personal fouls on the East team for their questionable tactics. Little, East guard, was banished by the official late in the second quarter when he deliberately tripped Bobby Stewart, who was dribbling in for a short shot.

Cullen went out on personal fouls in the third period, being replaced by Bill Booth, who played a dandy game. Laughlin played through the entire last half with three personal fouls charged against him.

East secured the opening tip-off, but Cullen sent the Potters out in front with a beautiful long shot from past the center of the floor. Pitts and Shaw both missed free throws, but Mott caged one. Cullen hit a technical foul, calling on East for delaying the game. Bozell slipped in for a short. Laughlin caged one from the side. Laughlin sank one from the center-line and Shaw followed in pretty as Little was doing the same for East, the first quarter ending, 9-5 in favor of the Dixons.

The Potters added two more points to their margin during the second quarter to hold an 18-12 lead at half-time. Pitts took a long pass for an easy short shot to open the period, but Cullen connected on another technical foul. Hinkle broke loose for a short shot and was fouled by Shaw, but he missed the charity toss.

Baseball Stars Come Meekly To Terms, Led by Babe Herman

Magnates Find Plenty of Takers for Their Offers in Last 24 Hours; Meine and Spencer Sign Buc Contracts.

BY HERBERT W. BARKER Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—News on the baseball front has suddenly turned bullish.

Not a single new holdout appeared anywhere on the horizon during the past 24 hours and such well-known exponents of the art of arguing over salary matters as Floyd Caves Herman and Heinie Meine meekly came to terms.

While Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Vernon Gomez and others still are listed on the holdout list, baseball observers pointed out that many ranking stars of the game have been prompt in signing contracts for 1933. In addition to Herman and Heinie, these include the Warner brothers, Bill Terry, Goose Goslin, Charley Gehring, Freddie Lindstrom, George Davis, Al Simmons and Joe Vosmik.

Herman, one of the most determined holdouts in the past, came to terms yesterday after conferring at Los Angeles with his new boss, William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs. Salary terms were not announced.

Meine paid a courtesy call on W. E. Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and ended by accepting terms for next season.

The Yankees announced they had received signed contracts from two players but neither happened to be Babe Ruth. They were from young players who will be identified later. There were rumblings around Yankee headquarters that the well-known Kentucky colonel, Earle Combs, was not exactly pleased with what he had been offered for next year.

The New York Giants kept up the good work they succeeded in getting Hughie Critz' signature to a contract. To offset this, however, the grapevine telegraph had it that Freddy Fitzsimmons' contract, unsigned, had come bouncing back to the business office.

Salineville Combine Crushes Columbiana in County Feature

Lange Quintet Rolls up 34-12 Score Over Old Rivals; Johnson and Addison Tally 27 Points to Pace Winners' Attack.

SALINEVILLE, Jan. 21.—Led by Johnson and Addison, who accounted for 27 points, Salineville high's basketball machine romped to an easy 34-12 victory over Columbiana here Friday night. It was the locals' third straight win in the county class "B" race.

Salineville jumped into a 6-2 lead in the first quarter and increased it to 12-3 at half-time and 18-5 at the end of the third period by scoring six points in each session. In the final quarter the Lange quintet parted the nets for 18 counters, while holding Columbiana to seven points.

Johnson found the hoops for seven field goals to take down scoring honors, although Addison was close behind with five double-pointers and three free throws. Reineher and Zellers paced the weak Columbiana attack with four and three points, respectively.

The Salineville Reserves dropped a 25-19 decision in the preliminary to the Columbiana seconds. The Columbiana varsity connected on two out of eight chances at the foul line, while Salineville converted four of 13 chances.

The Church Invites You

Conspiracy Against Jesus

OUR lesson for today, portrays one of the saddest incidents in the life of our Saviour. We read of Judas Iscariot who was one of twelve disciples chosen by our Lord, the one who for money, betrayed his best friend, in the most cowardly fashion. Judas did not only betray Jesus in some ordinary matter, but he entered into a conspiracy whereby he was to lead a band of crucifiers. These men were to seize Jesus and take Him before Pilate.

Judas, the traitor, had a double roll to play. He, being one of the twelve, could easily lead the enemies of Jesus into His presence without much, if any resistance. But Judas had another part to play. He was to identify the man wanted. He did not have the courage to say: There He is. So by previous arrangement the identification was to be made by Judas who was to walk right up to Jesus and to kiss Him.

We regret that space does not permit us to include, in this article, biblical record to indicate that Jesus knew just what Judas was doing. But that is quite well known to all Bible students. The entire incident is well told in the gospel according to Mark and Luke. The writer simply desires to comment upon the name of the traitor. I dare say the name of "Judas" is the most ugly name to be found in the Bible.

It might also be said: Of all the offenses known to man, the act of a traitor is the most offensive of all. Under many conditions our sympathies go out for a murderer, but under no condition, do we condone the act of a traitor. Hence, Judas Iscariot, stands out as the greatest offender in all history.

Matt. 26. Mary 14. Luke 22. John 18.

SCHOOL BOARD CLERK LAUDED

E. J. Gaston's Records Praised by State Examiner.

State Examiner Miss Ruth Kaufman, who, assisted by Miss Lillian Burns of Mansfield, has been conducting the annual examination of the books and statements of the board of education this week, lauded Clerk-Treasurer Emmett J. Gaston in a report of her findings at the board of education meeting Friday night at the high school.

Miss Kaufman and her assistant returned to the superintendent's office today to complete their work. They will go to Lisbon to begin an examination Monday, Miss Kaufman said.

The board meeting Friday night was brief, including only Miss Kaufman's report and a report on a recent survey of the furnaces in all schools here, by Member Collin F. Kinsey. The survey was made by engineers under the direction of Dr. Kinsey. No action regarding repairing or replacing of furnaces was taken Friday night.

NEW MONEY BILL GOES TO HOUSE

Measure, Cutting Budget, Introduced as President and Democratic Leaders Quarrel.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—A new money bill to appropriate $5,284,000 less than the budget asked was presented to the house today at the same time as a dispute was in full swing between President Hoover and the Democratic leadership over reductions in federal expenditures.

The President said that house Democrats had not cut expenditures $57,000,000 on the first five appropriation bills as Chairman Byrns of the appropriations committee claims, but actually had increased them $35,000,000.

Byrns' committee, using budget figures of the same class as those the chairman quoted in offering his side, then brought in a measure allowing $103,282,000 to run the departments of state, commerce, justice and labor in the next fiscal year. In the report on this bill, Oliver (D. Ala.) chairman of the sub-committee that handled it, said the budget asked $108,566,000.

The reductions, he said, extended even to the prohibition bureau which was allowed $9,120,000 against the $9,599,948 recommended.

URGES EUCLID QUIT CUYAHOGA

Mayor Asks Chamber to Back Move By City Which Would Transfer to Lake County.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—Secession of the city of Euclid from Cuyahoga county and its annexation to Lake county was proposed to the Euclid Chamber of Commerce last night by Mayor Charles R. Ely. He asserted the step, which would necessitate approval of residents of Euclid, Lake county officials and the legislature, would enable the Euclid tax rate to be reduced by 12 per cent.

Ely several times has made unsuccessful campaigns for election to the Cuyahoga county board of commissioners.

DAVIS TO PAY AUTO DAMAGES

Rural Lane Man Will Pay Repair Bill on Hampson Sedan Resulting From Collision.

J. E. Davis of Rural lane, who was held by police pending investigation of an automobile collision in West Seventh and Jefferson streets last Wednesday, was released after agreeing to pay damages to a car driven by James Hampson of West Second street.

HOMER LAUGHLIN WILL PROBATED

Son of Founder of Homer Laughlin China Company Leaves Estate Valued at $1,000,000.

Homer Laughlin, son of the founder of the Homer Laughlin China company of Newell, who died at his home in Los Angeles, Cal., on December 27, left an estate valued, in excess of $1,000,000, according to his will which has just been filed for probate in the Los Angeles county courts.

All of the estate, consisting principally of real estate, was left to his widow, Mrs. Alta A. Laughlin of 616 South Westmoreland avenue, Los Angeles, with the exception of personal effects which were bequeathed to his only son, Homer Laughlin III.

ROOSEVELT OFF TO SOUTH

Senator Norris With Him on Muscle Shoals Trip.

wants to obtain from the economic conference stabilization of world money exchanges and reciprocal tariff agreements which he believes would go a long way in again opening the avenues of trade.

Fully confident of his ability to deal with European debtors, the incoming chief executive has no idea of appointing a commission. He will rely entirely on himself and his secretary of state and personal assistants. The Rooseveltian thought in this direction was outlined definitely in his campaign, he said.

There was no amplification today by Mr. Roosevelt of his conference yesterday with President Hoover at which it was arranged for the state department to notify Great Britain of a willingness to enter into a treaty to receive envoys in March to discuss war debts and the economic conference.

There is every belief among his friends that other foreign powers will follow the line taken by Great Britain and send representatives on the same subjects.

But the president-elect intends to deal separately with each nation on the debts problem.

HERMIT WOMAN CITY VISITOR

ABERDEEN, Wash.—The "hermit woman on the hill" after 23 years on her frontier ranch near Spruce, has once again returned to city life. It is the first time she has been away from her ranch since 1909 when she attended the Alaska-Yukon exposition in Seattle.

The "hermit woman," Mrs. John Huelsdonk, was brought "out" by her husband when she developed a bad ankle and couldn't ride a horse. He rigged up a sled for her and hauled it over Hoh trails.

Since being here, Mrs. Huelsdonk has taken her first automobile ride.

BRITISH BANK GOVERNOR WEDS

Mr. Norman is 61 years old and his bride is 33.

'LAME DUCKS' HIT BY 34TH STATE

CASHIER HALTS BANK ROBBERY

Two Bandits Fail in Attempt to Hold Up Bank at Sunbury, Near Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Two young bandits attempted to hold up the Farmers bank of Sunbury, near here today, but were frustrated by the daring of the cashier.

When C. O. Armstrong, the cashier, opened the bank this morning the bandits stepped in and covered him with pistols. He obeyed a command to "stick them up" but backed slowly away from the holdup men until he reached a partition. He darted behind this refuge, and one of the bandits opened fire.

Apparently fearing the shooting would bring the townspeople out, the bandits left the bank, jumped into their automobile, and drove away. Ralph Morgan, a school boy who was passing at the time, took down the license number of the car and reported it to the police.

License plates on the car were stolen from the automobile of former State Senator Dallas Sullivan of Richmond, Union county. Sullivan did not learn the tags had been taken until officers went to his home to investigate.

UNFAIR COMPETITION

CINCINNATI, Jan. 21.—By mistake the Consolidated Oil company was named as the defendant in a suit charging unfair competition which was filed against nine major gasoline producing companies, it was revealed yesterday by the plaintiffs, a group of oil and gasoline dealers. They filed an application in federal court to substitute the name of the Sinclair Refining company.

FIREMAN CLAIMS HICCUGH CURE

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Demands for the services of Cy Burris, amateur "hiccough curer" are spreading.

Burris makes effective use of a manipulation of the sufferer's nose and upper lip to stop the hiccoughing, and his friends claim many "cures" to his credit.

Illness of John Hughes at Newport, 65 miles away, brought Burris his first long-distance "business." Home remedies had failed to aid Hughes, and reportedly doctors had experienced similar failure.

The Harrisburger, a captain of a volunteer fire company, went to the Hughes' home, applied his peculiar manipulation, and stopped the coughs, according to friends.

OHIOAN IS AUTO VICTIM

DAYTON, O., Jan. 21.—David Bloomershire, 74, West Alexandria, Ohio, died in a hospital here today of injuries received late yesterday afternoon when struck by an automobile near West Alexandria.

"Minute Studies" of Governors

JACOB DOLSON COX

Ohio Governors No. 28. By The Associated Press. The name Cox occupies a prominent position in Ohio politics in both parties, since two noted governors—one a Republican, the other a Democrat—have borne that name.

The first Governor Cox, of Ohio, was General Jacob Dolson Cox. He was born in Montreal in 1828. His parents, however, were citizens of the United States, and the following year they moved to New York.

He was graduated from Oberlin college, at Oberlin, O., in 1851, and became principal of the Warren, O., high school in 1852. He held that position three years, but took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1854.

He early espoused the anti-slavery cause and his enthusiasm for it was increased, perhaps, by his marriage in 1849 to the daughter of President Finney of Oberlin college, also an enemy of the slave system. Ten years later he was elected to the Ohio senate and soon came to be regarded, along with his colleague James A. Garfield, as one of the "radicals" of that body.

With the outbreak of the Civil war, Cox assisted in recruiting militia and was commissioned a brigadier general of United States volunteers by President Lincoln. At the battle of Antietam, he performed such valuable service that he was commissioned major general.

Elected governor of Ohio, he resigned from the army and was inaugurated January 15, 1866. His administration was, of course, concerned chiefly with post-war problems.

He served for a time as secretary of the interior under President Grant and then resumed his law practice in Cincinnati. He was president of the Toledo, Wabash and Western railroad and also served a term in congress.

Scrip And Barter :: America's New Money Substitutes

(EDITORS NOTE: This is the second of three articles on the development of scrip and barter in United States.)

By J. R. BRACKETT

For The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Always on the hunt for more money, men have made it out of everything from fishhooks and cheese to gold and faith in government.

Today, in some parts of America, even the promise to pay in goods and services is being made into money. This is the money used by the nation's unemployed in their barter and exchanges, about 150 of which have been organized in the United States since the depression. This money is scrip, simply a promise to pay the bearer goods and services.

Yet, while the unemployed seek to make more money, the United States in recent months has had more money in circulation than at any time in its history—that is, more coins and bills. There is more in circulation today than there was in 1929. What is this paradox?

As Prof. Ray Rogers of New York university points out, the paradox is simply that the money that circulates in the form of bills and coins is but a fraction of the total stuff that is used for money. The major part of our money is bank deposits.

No Shortage of Money. On June 30, 1932, total bank deposits stood at $11,963,000,000. At the same time total bills and coins in circulation totaled about $5,500,000,000. If all the depositors suddenly asked the banks for their money it would be utterly impossible to satisfy the demand. There is no shortage of money; rather, there is a shortage of circulation of money, Rogers says.

Professor Rogers explains that the bills and coins amount in effect to the nation's change. The bank deposits are the most important money.

Money nowadays thus is based largely on credit, on faith that deposits may be turned into bills and coin and ultimately into gold—and there is only some $12,000,000,000 of monetary gold in the whole world.

Swapping Came First. To reach this point in money's development has been the process of thousands of years. First man simply swapped goods for goods, or goods for services, a method he has never completely ceased using.

Then he tried commodity money. A bushel of wheat, for instance, may be used as a standard to value other things. Or he might use fishhooks, cheese, rock salt, tobacco, animal skins, nails, soap, spices, gum drops, woodpecker scalps and a multitude of other things which could be had and were used and therefore had value in themselves.

After commodity money came various forms based largely on their vanity or ornamental values. There were strings of beads, tiger claws, the exchanges are using scrip to facilitate the barter.

About the same time, but generally somewhat later, various metals came into use; copper, brass, iron, silver, platinum and gold.

Modern Systems Developed. Then developed the change from which modern monetary systems have grown.

Governments put the metals in vaults and issued pieces of paper promising to pay the bearer in the metal. At first, each piece of paper had to be backed by an equivalent amount of metal.

Then the system became more elastic until today in the United States a Federal Reserve note is backed by only 40 per cent gold, and bank deposits, of course, have a much smaller theoretical gold value.

What the next step will be is a puzzle to economists. The complete elimination of gold has been suggested by some as a possibility. Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale university has urged the adoption of a money based purely on faith, its value regulated according to an index of commodities.

The depression, in accentuating barter, has caused the unemployed to organize mutual exchanges, and

The history of money from the days of pure barter to the present complicated gold standard is shown in the above representation of the various kinds of money man has used, including the latest suggestions for revolutionary changes in the exchange system. The picture of coins are from the collection of the Chase National bank.
